Annual Meeting of the Irish Society of Urology (ISU)

Friday 16th and Saturday 17th September 2016
Hodson Bay Hotel, Athlone
Dear members, guests, and exhibitors, welcome to our 2016 Irish Society of Urology Annual Meeting. Following the record highest attendance at our 2015 Limerick meeting, I am hopeful the central location of Hodson Bay in Athlone will again attract attendees and facilitate travel from all parts of Ireland, North and South.

The quantity of submitted abstracts increased significantly this year and I thank our Academic Selection Committee for their adjudication. Congratulations to our trainees and trainers on their research output, we can promise a busy high quality academic programme. The ISU medal and second prize, the BAUS essay prize and the Anthony Walsh fellowship, will be awarded at the end of the meeting.

Our lengthy but essential management session last year precluded international speakers but this year I am delighted to have two guest lecturers. Peter Brinsden from the Bournehall Clinic in England is a renowned pre-eminent figure in developing in vitro fertilisation technology in the UK and his textbook remains the standard reference worldwide in infertility. Peter travels the globe lecturing and we are fortunate to welcome him to share his knowledge.

Richard Foster from Indiana University Medical Center trained with John Donohue and is the leading and most experienced RPLND surgeon in the world. It is a unique honour to welcome Rich to give his insights into the specialist field of testis cancer surgery.

Our ISU can be proud of our achievements in the last two years. I am indebted to Peter Ryan our Vice President for his help and support and to all members who have contributed their precious time and efforts.

Our Training Programme Director Ciaran Brady has reorganised our training, a major task, to comply with the rapid run-through model introduced by the RCSI. Crucially for Urology, while cooperating with RCSI in the merging of BST and HST into a seamless pathway, he has maintained the flexibility to enable future significant consultant manpower expansion, and facilitate the promising trainee who has followed a parallel training pathway. Padraig Daly and Kilian Walsh deserve credit for organising and developing urology at Core/BST level. There remain major challenges in maintaining our standards of training and accreditation within an increasingly influential intercollegiate framework.

Our ISU consultant manpower plan based on HSE regions, constructed by David Mulvin and Eamon Kiely is a major initiative, has been well received by RCSI, and provides a platform for discussion with the HSE. Our ambition is to at least double our consultant urologist:population ratio in the public sector, equivalent to that in the UK, but still less than recommended in Europe.

We are indebted to Rustom Maneshka for developing our ISU website. The site is user friendly to members and patients, raises our public profile and is essential in the modern Internet era. Richard Power as public relations officer deals with ongoing regular queries from patients, the public, media, and various bodies.

Professor Thomas Lynch, international relations officer, organised a highly successful Irish/American/International meeting at the 2016 AUA meeting. This has created the impetus to form a Hibernian Section within the AUA. Such collaboration is crucial to our trainees to maintain the tradition of fellowship appointments in prestigious units in the USA, especially in an era of run through training.
Our ISU has always emphasised the vital role of research in personal development, promoting the highest standards of treatment for patients, and maintaining Ireland in exceptionally high regard on the international stage considering our small society. David Galvin has launched our national research collaboration programme which creates the framework at institutional and national level to promote high quality research for all our trainees.

Ivor Cullen, our ISU treasurer, has circulated annual accounts. He has introduced an annual fee structure for the different membership categories and successfully negotiated optional BJUI int. subscription to members at a reduced rate. These and other measures should secure the future finances of our society.

Founded in 1973, our ISU constitution written by Dermot O’Flynn and Frank Duff was lost. With significant input from our secretary Gordon Smyth, Peter Ryan, and many members at our EGM, we have a new constitution. With clear definitions of ISU aims, goals, its officers and their portfolios, our society can move forward in a focused and purposeful manner to plan for the future development of urology in Ireland.

As a result of our members’ and representatives’ achievements, our ISU is now considered more seriously by various governing authorities. An exciting example has been the HSE appointment of two funded National Advisors in Urology. ISU was involved in the appointment of Eamon Rogers and Robert Flynn and look forward to this promising initiative.

The challenge for the future is to secure the ISU as The Recognised Authority in Ireland that represents urologists in all aspects of practice, training, governance and, not least, the body that determines training and accreditation standards and advises on manpower requirements.

It is with great pleasure I look forward to meeting you at our scientific and management sessions and during our social programme which includes dinner on Friday evening, golf on Saturday afternoon, followed by boat transfer to the ISU President's dinner at the Wineport Lodge restaurant.

Yours Sincerely,

John Thornhill, M.Ch. F.R.C.S.I
President, Irish Society of Urology
